Dear Ziyi,

On behalf of Chevron, welcome to the SEG Student Leadership Symposium and congratulations on your selection. Chevron is very proud to sponsor this event, which is part of our ongoing commitment to the future of geophysics from both a technical perspective as well as the people that make it happen. You are part of that commitment.

Leadership is about setting direction, providing vision and empowering others to achieve their goals. Leadership is a key component of Chevron's vision to be the global energy company most admired for its people, partnership and performance. I applaud your accomplishments in leadership which have been visibly recognized by your selection to this symposium. I hope you take full advantage of everything offered to you throughout the entire program, working in partnerships and teams to generate a better result and to learn from each other. Your experience here will provide a broad appreciation for what technical leadership is and what it may mean for you throughout your career.

I wish you the best for much success in your studies going forward and thank you for being a part of this symposium.

Best regards,
